Tuesday 10.01.17	Iain Whyte of Big Man Talking on Keep It Simple for great returns. Fact 98% of businesses tell us they depend on referrals and word of mouth for their business, Fact only 3% actually have a strategy. People tend to make things difficult for themselves when there are very simple strategies for you to follow that will get you great returns by speaking to people you already know. Some feedback from a recent attendee: "I have always left an Iain training session with clearly defined actions that when put in place bring positive and quantifiable results. Time in an training session with Iain is time well spent" None of this is rocket science and most people know what to do they are just unsure how to implement it.
Thursday 26.01.17	William Cameron of Scott & Co on Simplified Procedure Rules - The Story so far With a focus on service and enforcement implications?

Tuesday 07.02.17	Donna Mackay of Brodies on Cohabitee's Rights Upon Separation It's been over 10 years since cohabitees gained rights upon separation, as set out in the Family Law (Scotland) Act 2006. This session will outline how the law has developed in this area, with a focus on how it affects clients. Consideration will also be given to how clients can take simple steps to avoid being subjected to a claim.
Thursday 23.02.17	Ross McKenzie of Burness Paul on 2017 Data Protection Priorities – for You and Your Clients It has been well reported that the UK's current data protection regime will undergo significant changes with a new General Data Protection Regulation from 25 May 2018. Ross McKenzie, a data protection practitioner at Burness Paul in Aberdeen will use this session to talk through the key changes in the law which are relevant for practitioners and clients. The session aims to dispel some myths around the new law, and help identify what areas you should be prioritised in a review of in your practice.
